To morrow, at matinee and night, Mr. Faul Glimore will be seen in his new college play. "At Yale." Mr. Glimore, one of the hamisomest men on the American r. stage, has made the hit of his successful theorical carrier, and the critics have been outspoken in praise of his work as the hero who wins the great boat race for his college, and incidentally the young woman he loves.

In the second act the great spectacular rive, is shown, which is said to be one of the mechanical marvels or the stage.

Mr Glimore will be welcomed by a hose of friends, who delight in his rapid advancement. In his profession. The play is well worth seeing.
